The architecture edition

Exhibition halls, roof structures, entrances, courts, gardens and water landscapes take the lead. Portraits and object-led displays have been left out of this focused reading edition.

Read forward in time

The chronicle follows the inherited event-opening-year sequence. Within events, known earlier construction views precede the fair-period photographs. Modern comparisons remain beside the relevant historical view.

Then is not always now

Later photographs retain their available dates. Same-building, reconstructed-landmark and broader-site comparisons are identified separately. No pair is claimed to reproduce an exact historic camera position.

133 PHOTOGRAPHS / 100 HISTORICAL / 33 LATER VIEWS

Comparison key: SAME BUILDING = identified landmark; RECONSTRUCTED = later fabric; SITE / PARK = wider-location comparison, not the same building. Later-view dates are not all recent.

1853-1854 / NEW YORK

Exhibition of the Industry of All Nations

SITE: Reservoir Square / present Bryant Park

The Crystal Palace no longer stands. Modern views show the former fairground, not a surviving palace.

LATER SITE CONTEXT ONLY. No period photograph is reproduced for this event in the supplied selection. These are not historical camera-position matches.

1876 / PHILADELPHIA

Centennial International Exhibition

SITE: West Fairmount Park / Memorial Hall

Memorial Hall survives; it is only part of the former fairground. Modern photographs are not exact camera-position matches.

Memorial Hall: the surviving building

The same landmark is shown in 1876 and 2017. Viewpoints differ; this is not a camera-position reconstruction.

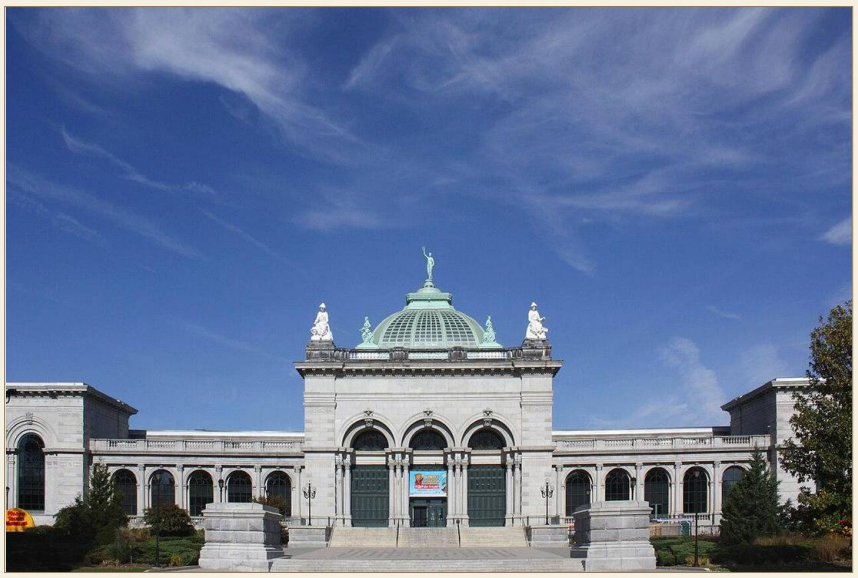

THEN

Memorial Hall at the Centennial Exposition

Visual reading

The historical photograph presents the building obliquely, while the later view is more frontal. Read the dome, arched openings, parapet and repeated bays together rather than treating perspective differences as evidence of demolition.

Photographic dates

Historical: 1876. Later: 2017. The two source records remain linked beneath the pictures; no exact camera-position match is asserted.

1881 / ATLANTA

International Cotton Exposition

SITE: Former Oglethorpe Park, Marietta Street

Later Exposition Cotton Mills photographs must not be relabelled as photographs taken at the 1881 fair. Exact modern footprint still needs a map-level check.

THEN

Catalogued 1880: site context, not an opening-day photograph.

1883-1887; annual editions / LOUISVILLE

Southern Exposition

SITE: Old Louisville / St. James Court and Central Park area

The five annual editions are kept as one series here. A building photograph needs its own capture year before assignment to an individual edition.

LATER SITE CONTEXT ONLY. No period photograph is reproduced for this event in the supplied selection. These are not historical camera-position matches.

1883-1884 / BOSTON

American Exhibition of the Products, Arts and Manufactures of Foreign Nations

SITE: Former Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue and West Newton Street

The hall was demolished. Modern 111 Huntington Avenue views identify the replacement-site area, not an exact historical viewpoint.

LATER SITE CONTEXT ONLY. No period photograph is reproduced for this event in the supplied selection. These are not historical camera-position matches.

World□s Columbian Exposition

SITE: Jackson Park / Midway Plaisance

The former Palace of Fine Arts survives in altered form as the science museum. The modern Statue of the Republic is not the original giant fair statue.

Jackson Park: the fairground landscape

The 2020 aerial shows the wider former fairground, not the same Court of Honor camera position or a survival of every palace in the historical view.

Visual reading

The historic plate describes a court through its water axis, statuary and facing facades. The later aerial records the wider park. This is a comparison of the exhibition landscape with its later setting, not a one-for-one match of the buildings.

Photographic dates

Historical: 1893. Later: 11 August 2020. The two source records remain linked beneath the pictures; no exact camera-position match is asserted.

About this edition

133 images, architecture first

This re-edit retains 100 historical and 33 later photographic files from the supplied 196-image PDF. Sixty-three portraits, object-led displays, markers and other peripheral views are omitted. The original 196-image edition remains the source for those subjects; the count here is not a count of every surviving photograph of the fairs.

Seven comparisons, different kinds of evidence

Memorial Hall and Buffalo are same-building comparisons. The Palace of Fine Arts is explicitly labelled as substantially reconstructed. The Grand Basin and Seattle campus basin are landscape comparisons. Jackson Park and Piedmont Park are broader site comparisons, not exact frame matches.

Chronology and uncertainty

Event order follows opening year in the supplied register. Where only a year is supplied, this edition does not invent an opening day. Known 1908 preparation photographs appear before the Seattle 1909 fair-period pictures. A date range or unconfirmed date remains a range or uncertainty.

A newspaper treatment, not a forged newspaper

The Daily Apple masthead, rules, serif type and newsprint-toned page are a modern 1920s-inspired design. This is a retrospective publication, not an original newspaper issued in 1920. The generated preview image is not used as archival evidence or reproduced in this PDF.

Images and rights

Photographs were extracted from the supplied PDF and resized with their aspect ratios intact. No building, person, sky or landscape has been generated or replaced. Existing colors are retained, including cyanotypes and modern color views. The source links preserve the path to individual credit and rights records; this compilation does not establish commercial-reuse permission.

The source collection

Source: Break Thy Rule - American Fairs - 196 Embedded Images.pdf (146 pages), together with its supplied chronological register and archive links. Earlier fictional or esoteric artwork is not part of this architecture edition.
